

Santorre di Santarosa

via Paolo Braccini, 70

This building is located in the San Paolo district and it is now the seat of two lyceums and a technical school. The architecture is typical of the Fascist era: the "Lictoriae" fasces remains a testimony of this style, reproduced on the glass entrance of the building. Over the years it has had different administrative functions and several managers and the building, Santorre of Santa Rosa went through several years of decline. However, it has been used as a school since the late 50's. In addition to evening school educational courses and activities there are three different courses of study and a library.
